INFORMATION SYSTEM ANALYSIS, DESIGN AND DEVELOPMENT

VOLUME 1, NO. 3 JULY 2026

JOURNAL FOCUS AND SCOPE

Information System Analysis, Design and Development is a peer-reviewed academic journal that publishes high-quality research on the analysis, design, development, and implementation of information systems that support organizational processes, decision-making, and digital transformation across various sectors, covering topics such as information systems analysis and modeling, systems design methodologies, business process optimization, enterprise systems, information systems governance and alignment, organizational innovation, and the application of information systems in public institutions, education, healthcare, and small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). The journal is published in January, April, July, and October.

Articles published in Information System Analysis, Design and Development comprise original scientific research findings (top priority), novel scientific review articles (lower priority), and commentaries or critiques regarding existing publications. The journal accepts manuscripts and articles covering areas such as information system analysis and modeling, system design methodologies, business process optimization, enterprise systems, information system governance and alignment, organizational innovation, and the implementation of information systems in public institutions, education, healthcare, and small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

Articles featured in Information System Analysis, Design and Development have undergone a peer-review process. The journal accepts only original research findings (top priority) and novel scientific review articles (lower priority). The decision regarding the acceptance or rejection of a scientific article rests with the Editorial Board, based on recommendations provided by peer reviewers.
